We say nominally in cousequence of the Sultan having no actual power in any part of his territory. These lands are being bought by persons in Singapore who if the necotiations carry through will receive a Chop from either the Sultan or his Wazirs, who are all so hopelessly poor and in debt that they would be guilty of any extravagance to obtain a little ready money. Probably the sale will be effected, the money paid, and the seal granting the land be given. This land is being sold at the large price of 25 cents per sore; no one, however, really knows where the land is situated or to whom it properly belongs. These are secondary considerations both to purchaser and seller. Shortly, we suppose, the land will be offered to Company, formed in Hongkong, which seems to be the Arcadia of speculators in tobacco culture, who will have to pay from $1 to $2 per sore, giving a good profit to the original purchaser. When this company sends its Manager and coolies to cultivate the concession, even they can locate it their trouble will be only beginning. As I understand a present no provision whatever has been made, and am not aware that any tentative arrangemen has been attemped. It has long been thought hat sufficient gathering ground exists at Mounain Lodge, at Anton's House, and near Mr Ryrie's. I do not know how that may be affected , he movement to fill up one of these depressions cutting away the the hillside. but I believe bundant space yet exists near Mountain Lolge the Governor would permit an ornamental and there, which would supply the Gap if the water was used economically during the col weather. Possibly some better means may be discovered for supplying the hill district. Some confident that the use of electricity in the way of pumping is a better method than storage t that is a matter of technical detail on which there are better able than I am to form a prinion. But the fact remains that we must have water or we cannot live there. As the Chairman has already remarked drainge esentially depends on the water aund The bucket system which prevails is an ac mirable one and I hope that nothing will ever be done, in hill or valley, that will tend to the abandonment or immediment of that most useful arrangement. Possibly, how over, there may be an advantage in a six in oh. system of drainage pipes, especially where the sawage rouges concentration f

the unrooses of irrigation or agriculture, but would seem to me that in this colony we do not want the sewage concentrated, we want ercess would, be preferable to small pipes such as are now being put down. The question is whether we want the seware concentrated for agricultural purposesthink not—or whother we went it imdiluted for the purpose of speedy re moval... I think there can be no question alou that. We want the sewage removed and t more water there is for the purpose th better. If the surface water has access to the whole of it, the balance of the water runs away over the surface. I cannot see any necessity for a separate system by which surface water i excluded from the drains as in the present use (Applause). I have no doubt the system was stopted under recent ideas at home. There is a great deal of feeling on the subject in England but the system of drainage which is adapted to London, to Bayswater and other parts of London is not adapted to Hongkong. As already re marked, we had no sickness and no bad smells under the old system. Now unfortunately we have both. and perhaps we may attach some importance to the medical opinions given that this is attributable in some degree to the new system imported into Hongkong, a system which I hope most sincerely will be confined to the Hill districtand will not be introduced in any other part of the colony. (Applause). Mr. FRANCIS-I would ask permission of the meeting to state that I flatly contradict the statement in the Colonial Secretary's letter on the subject of the Peak drainage, that the com munication forwarded by the Penk re idents to the Governor and by him to the Sanitary Board was neglected by the Board. The communication was circulated among the members and the Board felt that it needed arther information. It had no official aformation whatever from any source

sheme had been inagurated at all. It was asked take steps to compel the residents to connect with these main drains and the first thing it did was to apply through its Sacretary, to the lovernment to be farnished with plans, reports and statements as to what the system consisted , and I think every member of this meeling vill thoroughly understand that information in some shape was necessary before any thing could day:be done. It was quite impossible for the Sanitary Board to call upon residents at the Feak alter their present system and connect with B. system of which they did not inderstand the details. The Board know absolutely nothing about the system. I do not ents. The following notes from his master's pen are interesting:-In May, 1884, a tall, thin young Moor, looking pinched and prematurely old, applied to me, among many others, for employment. His appearance was remarkable. His only head-gear was a piece of string tied twice round his shaven head. The rest of his attire consisted of a tattered Jelub, and a pair of much-mended calico drawers. He had a hollow cough, which seemed to one the impression of suffering and prias one who had ben carrying too heavy leads. No sconer had I agreed, at the recommendation of a Consulute clerk, to give him a trial than he seemed to change alto ether; and became as merry as a cricket. Mchammed's half-brother. Jaffa who was much older, and whom I had previously employed as a porter. ient him some rather better clothes, newly washed; and I gave him a red fer, in which he locked quite spruce. In explanation of his condition at that time he stated that he had been left an orphan at an early age, and worked with his brother Jaffa at anything they could get to do. After several years they had saved up a few dollars, and determined to visit their old home near Mazagan. They tied up their belongings in a couple of bundles and proceeded on foot, the journey being more than 200 miles. When they had got some distance out, they stopped at a weekly soko, or market, to buy something, and had occasion to change one of their precious; hard-earned dollars. The Sheikh of the place heard that two strangers with "plenty of dourss" were in the market, and s at for them. They told their simple tal, which the Shelkh refused to believe, saying that he had no doubt they were thieves. He therefore had them beaten, r lieved them of all their belongings, even to their new shoes, and sent them off in the state in which I found them. Mohammed set himself diligently to learn English. He was employed to provide food for and otherwise attend to the comforts of many poor people who came from long distances to seek my aid in their difficulties. Mohammed took great pleasure in this work, and soon attained considerable popularity by his kind and symps. thetic disposition; meanwhile, he improved rapidly in appearance. Some months afterwards the Sheikh who had rebbed them was recognised in the streets of Tangier: I caused him to be arrested and taken before the authorities. when he was desperately frightened. He was at the time in charge of a large amount of treasure which he was conveying to the Sultan;

Mohammed entered my apartment with the pacific professions recently made by the Lone day and said that the Sheikh of "so-and-so" desired an audience. I inquir d who he was. and what he wanted. "He my farzar," said Mohammed. "Your father!" said I. "Why. your father has been long since dead." "No sir, not my farzar; same like my farzar; husband my mozzer." "Why, your mother died before one father. What do you mean, you crazy dellow? Anyhow let the Sheikh come in and will hear what he has to say." The sheikh, a big, burly, hard-faced, well-to-do looking Moor, entared with a lot of followers, and, begging my acceptance of a present, desired my friendship. During the conversation that ensued the Sheikh told me that he had married Mohammed's mother when she was quite young, but he also mar ied another wife, with whom she quarrelled so desperately that he divorced her. and gave her to Ismaail el Bedewith Mouannmed's father, with whom she went northwards: I inquired about her family. The Sheikh said that she was of good family, but they were unfortunate, and there was no near relation living. Did you get anything with her?" I inquired. Oh, yes, some land near Tott." "Did you give back her dowry when you sent her away ?" "Why, no, certainly not. he could not take hand with her. She went to Tangier, I believo." "Then her land is just where it was, and belongs of right to her son, my servant. You will doubtless do me the favour of seeing that he is put in possession without delay." The Sheikh seemed preatly surprised; but as he desired my friendship and knew the law thoroughly, he had no alternative but to acquiesce in the arrangement, by which Mohammed's position and prospects in life were greatly altered. In the month of November, 1886, I was lying very ill in a little French steamer, weatherbound, at the mouth of the Bw-reg-reg River: I subsisted almost entirely on milk, which was generally brought on board by sympathising natives from Sales, near to which town the vessel was lying. One day Muhammed went to visit some friends in Rabat, and lingered with them till it was getting dark. It suddenly corred to him that the supply of milk on beard would be exhausted. He histened to prooure some, and set off with it to the beach in search of a boat, but the coastguard would not allow one to put off. Meanwhile it became quite dark and very cold. The seawatside the bar was running mountains high, and the roaring of the suri was deafening at times, and although we were in a sheltered spot, our vessel was influenced by the moving of the water inside the bar. I was lying upon a couch in the cabin on deck, and the doctor was sitting by my side. "Is Mohammed aboard?" I asked. "No. said the ductor. "nor is he likely to come aboard on such a pight as this." I said. "I thought that [heard his voice in the distance calling ' Doctor, doctor, and something else,"-" It is impossible," said the doctor; but I felt very uncomfortable, and listened impatiently. When the Duke of Wellington was Commander-in-Chief of the army of occupation in ris, there were at one time constant duels between English and French officers, forced on by the latter purposely insulting the former. ine Duke issued a peremptory order that no English officer should give or necept a challenge from a French officer. Soon after this a French marshal met an English colonel in the street, and shouldered him off the causeway, whereupon the colonel doubled his fist and knocked him down. Forthwith the Duke received a solemn complaint that a marshal of France had been assaulted by a British officer. This he was officially bound to take notice of ; therefore he sent to the colonal a formal reprimand, but enclosed within it an invitation to dinner.

Mr. Smith, it seems, in writing to Mr. Wilkie Colling respecting a petition for a pension for Hall & Holtz C. Co. the widow of a novelist, asserted that "there are H. Brick & Cement... regulations against the grant of pensions to the H & C. Bakery writers of novels (unless bistorical) or their Hongkong & C. Gas. widows." Mr. Collins, naturally astonished at H. Dairy Farm this declaration of the First Lord, forwarded the H Electric Light ... letter to the Society of Authors; and Mr. Besant. wrote asking for a copy of these regulations, and pointing out that several pensions had been granted to novelists who had not written histori- H. Steam Laundry. cal novels. Mr. Smith, or his secretary, was Hongkong Rope...... obliged to admit this, but refused a copy of the regulations, and declared that " the object which the distributors of the Fund have kept steadily in view of recent years is to award pensions to those works whichere of a scientific and technical character." Mr. Beaunt replied, pointing out that such a regulation quite perverted the resolution of 1837, and that as late as last year the First Lord had given a pension to an unhistorical novelist. Mr. Smith, being thus routed, wisely declined to continue the discussion; but one cannot help wondering what would be the present position of his firm if their bookstalls had been confined to historical novels and works of a scientific and technical character.

The London correspondent of the Birmingham Post writes :- Through the good offices of an influential official at Baskingham Palace, I have been allowed a peep b. hind bue scenes upon the domestic life of the Shah. He has a keen taste for luxurious surroundings-A taste very much enhanced in nicety since he was here last. At that time he could not fathem the mysteries Luzon Sugar of our watches; now a handsome diamond studdel chronometer and a heavy gold albert are indispensable articles of personal adorament; then. having stripped a savoury bone of its surround. ings he deposited it under the table (a fact vouched for by my information now his cooks are forbidden to offer him such a temptation, and all bones are excluded from his dishes. Then he was passionately fond of chewing coarse black tobacco, disposing of the juice in a very summary fashion; now, while not altogether eschewing the luxury, he has a penchant for rich Havanas. The Shah, further, is very methodical. He rises at half-past seven every morning irrespective of the hour of his retiring. Two dusky valets assist him in his ablutions, carefully arranging his coal-black hair and curving his moustache. During the latter ordeal he reclines on a soft settle, and wears a dark-blue undress unifrom coat, somewhat like a" rec er," the buttons of which are of abony. At a quarter-past eight he partakes of an unsweetened cup of black coffee, and a quarter of an hour later of some delicately-flavoured Persian dish. Then he is ready for the day's work. All the latters he receives are translated and submitted for his instructions and at half-past ten he prepares for visitors. Upon all occasions when returning from his daily-or rather nightly executaions, he partakes of a cup of black coffee and either smokes his strong tobacco or a prime Havana before retiring. My informant tells me that the jewels on the uniform his Majesty wears on all State occasions here are said to be worth £5,000. The breast is encrusted with jewels strung hither and thither like a hussar's gold lace front.

The announcement that Mr. Chamberlain to preside at the dinner to the Kendals on the occasion o their departure for Amercia will, says the Birmingham Mail, revive recollections of a now distant period when the member for West Birningham was no mean exponent of histrionic a t. It may not be generally known | 614 116 that many years ago, before he was drawn into the political vortex, Mr. Chamberlain was an lain's biting and sarcas to humour and perfect enunciation were displayed to great advantage. his facial expression—the clean cut features being well set off with a powdered wir -is described as admirable, and every line in Puff's long but never tedious speeches told with consummate effect. Twenty-one years have sped by since then. Earlier than that period Mr. Chamberlain Negesthing at an amateur performance played the French. Shanghal..... at an amateur performance played the Frenchman's part in the too-seldom acted piece "The Wonderful Woman," and in action, emphasis, and conception his impersonation was equally excellent. In Charles Mathews's favourite part in "The Liar," Mr. Chamberlain achieved an. other unequivocal success. He gave several performances at his own house, and on each occasion he impressed his andience by the sparkle and vivacity of his light comedy. Mr. Chamberlain has also proved himself to be a dramatic author of no mean capacity. On one occasion he wrote a farce, entitled "Who's Who?" and produced it, playing himself one of the parts. Meeting a local author at one of the Highbury receptions not very long ego, Mr. Chamberlain congratulated him on having got a piece produced on the London boards. "I used to write plays myself, when I was a very young mad," added the member for West Birmingham, with a merry twinkle in his eye. "but I could never get a manager to scoopt them." "You would if you wrote a plece now," was the author's happy reply. It is pro-bable that Mr. Chamberlain's days of writing for the stage were passed in London shortly after he left school, and before he took up his House in Plantantium

VIGILANT, Amr. ship, Gould.—Russell & Co.

PRONUNCIATION. An Angle-Chinese Dictionary, published at Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objecta in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in cutembo. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the [652] Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those very margina and vacant spaces which have heretorore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work the following facts are submitted for consideration:-Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16.000

Chinese characters, and Medburst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitheric pub-

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. Co parties resident in England and interested China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-

It comprises upwards of two thousand large VOL IMPREIAL QUARTO, Price, $20. A Large REDUCTION in PRICE is made to Purchasers of SIX or more Copies. TONDON
